Re: WWJ Radio Detroit

Dear Mr. Martin:

We have been informed that CBS Radio is presenting a case to the FCC about how the company's stations work to serve the public interest by addressing local issues. Here in metropolitan Detroit, CBS owned and operated WWJ is the only all-news station in the market. As such, it is uniquely positioned to keep the residents of the area informed about daily news events and the continuing issues that confront the community. Beyond its bread-and-butter on-air news programming, the station engages in a broad variety of community involvement projects, ranging from promoting the regional economy to mounting an ambitious financial literacy campaign to providing advice on caring for aging parents.

As the public affairs voice of the Detroit Jewish community, the Jewish Community Relations Council often engages the local media on thorny public issues such as the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. In their response to our concerns, we have found the staff and management of WWJ to consistently be committed to accuracy and fairness to advocates on all sides of issues.

WWJ is a visible, engaged and effective asset to our city and region.

Respectfully,

Robert Cohen
